Qualification Description

Bachelor's Degree Program: Arabic Studies

1. Aims and Educational Objectives

The undergraduate program in Arabic Studies aims to train highly qualified experts who can use the written and spoken forms of Arabic on a proficient level and have a thorough theoretical knowledge and understanding of the culture and the socio-political history of the Arab world and of the doctrine of Islam with its branches, schools of thought, and religio-political currents.

2. Description of the educational content (knowledge and skills required for a successful professional realization; general and theoretical background, specific areas of study, etc.)

The curriculum comprises core theoretical subjects in three fields of knowledge – language (linguistics and translation studies), literature (literary studies), and society and culture (social studies and Islamic studies). Most of the theoretical courses consist of lectures and practical seminars in different proportions, which allows for acquiring knowledge in the respective research field and at the same time, developing analytic skills for its implementation.

In addition to the core theoretical subjects, there is a compulsory practical course in Modern Standard Arabic, which extends from the first to the last of the 8 semesters, with a total of 1500 contact hours. This course is intended to bring the language knowledge and skills of the students from zero to proficiency. It is structured so as to develop all basic communicative skills – listening and reading comprehension, speaking and writing, in addition to the skill of translating. This happens on the basis of topics relevant to the potential fields of professional realization.

In addition to the compulsory courses, the students are obliged to choose a number of elective courses, through which they can (a) extend their knowledge in one of the three fields of Arabic Studies, mentioned above; (b) develop their skills for translating and interpreting between Bulgarian and Arabic; (c) master one or more colloquial varieties of Arabic (dialects); (d) study a second Oriental language – Hebrew, Turkish, or Farsi.

There is also a group of optional courses that the students can choose if they want to further extend their knowledge and skills according to their interests and/or plans for professional realization. Some facultative courses are grouped in thematic modules such as “Egyptology and Assyriology,” or qualification modules such as “Pedagogy of Foreign Language Teaching.”

3. Professional and general competences, specific competences

The graduates of the BA Program in Arabic Studies are supposed to be able to use the Arabic language for (a) extracting specific and general information from written Arabic texts on different topics and in a variety of genres; (b) translating written Arabic texts into Bulgarian; (c) writing specific types of Arabic texts for everyday personal or professional needs; (d) communicating orally with native speakers of Arabic on everyday personal or professional topics. The knowledge and skills related to understanding the past and present of the Arab world and Islam, as well as the culture, sociopolitical, and economic processes in the contemporary Middle East and North Africa, contribute to the training of highly qualified experts on the region.

4. Professional realization (according to the National Classification of Occupations in the Republic of Bulgaria /based on the International Standard Classification of Occupations (ISCO)/ and in reference to the place of the future specialists in the National Qualifications Framework for higher education and the European Qualifications Framework for higher education)

The graduates from the BA program in Arabic Studies can work in state institutions or private companies, where a proficiency in Arabic and a knowledge of the history, culture, and politics of the Arab world are needed, in fields such as education, translation and interpretation, media, public administration, international relations and trade, as well as private businesses. They could also continue their education in a Master's or a PhD program. The graduates who have studied the facultative Pedagogy module can work as teachers of Arabic in the system of general school education.

According to the National Qualifications Framework for higher education and the European Qualifications Framework for higher education the graduates from the BA program in Arabic Studies can find themselves in demand for careers in:
